I give and bequeath to The Century Association, of the City of New York, a New York corporation, the sum of $_____.

HISTORICAL

The CENTURY was founded, and its first Constitution adopted, January 13, 1847. One hundred gentlemen engaged or interested in Letters and the Fine Arts had been invited to join in forming the Association, of which number forty-two accepted the invitation and became Founders. Forty-six others joined during the year.

The name, suggested by the number originally invited to be members, was the proposal of Edgar S. Van Winkle.

On March 7, 1857, it was incorporated by an Act of the Legislature, which was amended March 29, 1883.

From the spring of 1847 to the spring of 1849 it occupied rooms at No. 495 Broadway.

From the spring of 1849 to the spring of 1850 it occupied rooms at No. 435 Broome Street.

From the spring of 1850 to May, 1852, it occupied rooms at No. 575 Broadway.

From May, 1852, to the spring of 1857, it occupied the house at No. 24 Clinton Place (now No. 46 East 8th Street).

From the spring of 1857 to January 5, 1891, it occupied the house at No. 109 (old No. 42) East Fifteenth Street.

On January 10, 1891 it removed to its present club-house, No. 7 West Forty-third Street.

Successive amendments to the Constitution fixed the limit of resident membership as follows: March 5, 1853, 200 members; March 7, 1857, 250; May 7, 1859, 350; February 1, 1862, 400; April 7, 1866, 500; February 6, 1875, 600; December 5, 1885, 700; May 3, 1890, 800; February 6, 1892, 1000. The limit of non-resident membership has been fixed as follows: February 6, 1892, 300; December 3, 1921, 400; January 14, 1928, 500; June 3, 1941, 600; March 1, 1945, 700.

On May 4, 1901, John Bigelow and Parke Godwin, only surviving members of The Column, a literary society founded in 1825, presented to The Century the privileges of fellow-membership with them. The silver memorial column bears a lamp which since 1858 had burned at every meeting of The Column and is now lighted at each gathering of The Century.

REPORT OF THE BOARD OF MANAGEMENT

THE Board of Management of The Century Association submits the following report for the year 1952:

MEMBERSHIP

THE MEMBERSHIP a year ago was 1602, of whom 945 were resident and 657 were non-resident members. It is now 1624, consisting of 926 resident and 698 non-resident members classified as follows:

Resident members paying dues	926
Non-resident members paying dues	637
Honorary members	2
Absent and other members exempt	59

During the year 84 members were elected—53 resident and 31 non-resident members. Two resident and 3 non-resident members were reinstated. Twenty-nine resident and 20 non-resident members died during the year; five resident and 13 non-resident members resigned. Thirty-three resident members were transferred to the non-resident class, and 13 non-resident members were transferred to the resident class.

At the end of the year there were 74 vacancies in the resident class and 63 in the non-resident class, with 84 candidates in the former and 55 candidates in the latter.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON LITERATURE

THE PRINCIPAL SUBJECT considered by the Committee on Literature for 1952 was that of adequate provision for members of the Association of facilities for concentrated reading and study.

This subject, referred to the Committee by the Board of Management, has a long and vexatious history, and it seems improbable that a wholly satisfactory solution can be found within the present club house building.

The nub of the problem lies in the use of the hall east of the dining room, south of the Graham library and west of the library reading room. It would appear that this hall was intended to be part of the Club library; but use and custom have long since established it as a necessary adjunct to the dining room.

The latest thorough study of this problem was made by the Centennial Building Committee and was summarized in the report of Mr. Henry deForest Baldwin to the Board of Management under date of November 25, 1946. Mr. Baldwin observes that "the present dining room is described as a supper room in the original plans of the building. It was not designed and never intended for its present busy use for luncheon and dinner." Elsewhere in the same report Mr. Baldwin notes:

The most cogent and persistent of the ideas for improvements that came from the membership and were developed within the Committee relate to the kitchen, the serving and eating facilities. It was pointed out that the dining room is noisy to the point that conversation is impossible, that daily we overflow into the hallway and sometimes into the library and that for monthly meetings the kitchen and serving facilities are wholly inadequate.

The Committee took note of the fact that changing conditions in New York had, for a century decade by decade, made the eating facilities of the Club more and more important to the essential life of the Club.

To obtain more space for eating—uncrowded, quiet and adequate—it has been suggested that the present library could be used as a dining room. The long table could be set up there and life in the Century would go on without essential change—only more beautifully, more calmly and more adequately.

Library space is proposed to be provided by adding a fifth floor, adequately set back, to afford a terrace, on top of the present building. Here would be provided a reading room, reference library, space for the Graham and Platt libraries, a rare book room, offices, work rooms, etc. The plan of the proposed fifth floor, attached hereto, is not fully worked out: it is submitted only to indicate the possibilities of fifth floor construction in keeping with the Club's needs as an institution whose principal interest is in letters and the arts.

Had circumstances permitted the full accomplishment of the proposals advanced in 1946 by the Centennial Building Committee, the library problem would have been solved handsomely. Notable improvements were made, particularly in the kitchens and service areas, but nothing could be done to restore the tranquility essential to the fullest use of the Club's library.

The Committee on Literature for 1950 installed small work tables and chairs along the north wall of the reading room. This measure has not proved successful. The space thus provided can be reached only through the private dining room on the fourth floor, or by a narrow and precipitous winding stair from the reading room on the third floor. Furthermore, the necessary bustle and confusion attendant upon the setting of tables and serving dinner, and particularly lunch, are proving more annoying than in the reading room proper.

After considering various alternatives, the Committee on Literature has offered the following recommendations to the Board of Management:

1. Except for the monthly dinner, service of meals in the Graham library to be discontinued.
2. A reasonably soundproof door to be installed between the Graham library and the hall to the south.
3. The contents and general appearance of the Graham library to remain as at present. Comfortable chairs and small writing tables to be installed for members of the Association desiring quiet for sustained reading and study.

In the course of the year the library was appraised at $122,493; in 1940 the value was set at $113,740. On December 31, 1952, the bookstock stood at 16,672 volumes.

Gifts by members continue to be the principal source for extending and enriching the Association's collection.

On behalf of the Association, the Committee gratefully acknowledges gifts made during 1952 by the following:

REPORT OF THE HOUSE COMMITTEE

The House Committee continued in 1952 to buck the economic tide, but found encouragement in the understanding and support of the members and in the cooperation of the staff in its endeavor to hold steadily mounting costs at bay, or its approximation. One such move of economy was the suspension of bar and restaurant services on Memorial Day, the Fourth of July, Labor Day, and all Sundays during the summer period, May 30 to September 30, inclusive. Provision was made for sandwiches and the like for members who used the Club on those days.

Ferdinand Fantin, our faithful and imaginative Chef, at his own expressed wish, retired from active work and went to California to enjoy a well-earned rest after having triumphantly catered to our tastes and whims for almost thirty years. The Century Association is fortunate in having found as his successor Victor Vacher, a skillful and seasoned Chef de cuisine.

The House Committee is grateful to Paul Kieffer and his wine committee for their careful supervision of our wine cellar.

The House Committee acknowledges on behalf of The Century Association the following gifts from members:

A magnificent silver service with candelabras and a splendid centerpiece from Elihu Root, Jr.

Flowers for the dining room from Stuart W. Jackson.
Gaspé salmon from W. G. Russell Allen, Carl H. Ernlund, and William H. Nye.
Salmon from Sherman Baldwin.
Salmon from Richardson Pratt.
Smoked Norway salmon from Harold S. Deming.
Floral wreath for "Miss Ellie Vator" from Basset Jones.
Florida limes from Henry Clapp Smith.
Fresh corn from Frank C. Nicodemus, Jr.
Green mint from Edward J. Mathews.
Salmon from Allen Evarts Foster.
Brook trout from Edward R. Finch.

The January meeting, as usual, was held in memory of Centurions who died during the year. At subsequent meetings the following speakers, all Centurions, were heard:

February—Whitney H. Shepardson, "A Visit to India and Pakistan."
March—William James, "Abbott Thayer."
April—Dillon Ripley, "An Expedition into Nepal."
May—Philip C. Jessup, "The United States in a Troubled World."
November—Paul Kieffer, "Address of Welcome to New Members."

At a ceremony in the East Room, on May 3, a health was drunk to the memory of Henry deForest Baldwin, Centurion from 1905 to 1947, by a score of members, including his son Sherman. The late Austin Strong made a brief tribute and unveiled a low, double-deck table at which Baldwin was wont to sit of an afternoon, surrounded by friends old and young. Into the table top has been countersunk a silver tablet, designed by T. M. Cleland, and reading: "Henry deForest Baldwin, the Noblest Roman of Them All."

The front elevator, which has served us so well for forty years, was retired on September 17, and, thanks to the reverence and ingenuity of Geoffrey Platt, was transformed into a telephone booth of vast nostalgia. Under the wise and spirited generalship of Franklin Kirkbride, a Committee on Levitation was formed for the purpose of raising funds for a new elevator, and was highly successful; the other members were Paul Manship and Richardson Pratt. Basset Jones, Geoffrey Platt, and Lawrence Grant White were responsible for the technical details.

REPORT OF THE MUSIC COMMITTEE

On March 9th, 1952, the Music Committee presented Mack Harrell, baritone, in a concert of Lieder. Mr. Harrell, who has a secure reputation at the Metropolitan Opera and in our great concert halls, is equally at home in the intimate surroundings of the Century. His artfully contrived program included arias by Bach and songs by American composers, leading to the Dichterliebe of Schumann, one of the inspired song cycles. Mr. Harrell sang with beauty of tone and rare understanding. An audience of Centurions and their guests listened with rapt attention.

AMENDMENTS

The Constitution and By-Laws of the Association and the Rules of the Committee on Admissions contain the following amendments adopted since the 1951-1952 Year-Book was printed:

Constitution—Article VI, Section 4, third paragraph, amended January 8, 1953:

At every monthly meeting of the Association, the Committee shall furnish printed lists, properly classified, of the names of the persons recommended for admission, not exceeding twenty in number, and the Association shall then proceed to vote by depositing the lists with tellers appointed by the Chairman. The erasure from the list of any name shall be considered a vote in the negative. If negative votes be cast against any candidate to the number of one-fifth of the votes cast, his candidacy shall be referred back to the Committee on Admissions for further consideration. If the candidacy of such person again comes before the Association, negative votes cast against such person to the number of one-fifth of the votes cast shall exclude him from membership.

By-Laws—Section 11, first and second paragraphs, amended May 1, 1952:

A Nominating Committee shall annually be constituted as follows. The Board of Management shall at its last spring meeting propose as candidates for such committee the names of seven members of the Club, of whom two shall be members of the Board of Management, not eligible for reelection, and two shall be members of the Committee on Admissions. The names shall be posted in the club-house at least twenty days before the November monthly meeting of the Club. At any time not later than ten days before the November monthly meeting, additional candidates may be proposed for the Committee, provided that in each case the proposal, indorsed by twenty-five resident members, be presented in writing to the Secretary of the Club.

All the names proposed by either of the above methods shall be printed in a single list, the names proposed by the Board of Management being designated by an asterisk. From this list, which shall be distributed at the monthly meeting in November, the Club shall elect by ballot the Nominating Committee. Each member may vote for not more than seven names on the list, and the seven candidates receiving the highest number of votes shall be declared elected.

Rules of the Committee on Admissions—Rule I, amended December 4, 1952:

The name, residence, and profession or occupation of every candidate for membership in this Association shall be entered in the Book of Candidates kept for this purpose; such entry shall be accompanied by the signatures of the proposer and seconder. The Secretary of the Committee may make such entry when letters of recommendation have been received from both proposer and seconder.

ACT OF INCORPORATION

CONSTITUTION AND BY-LAWS

AN ACT TO INCORPORATE
THE CENTURY ASSOCIATION

PASSED MARCH 7, 1857

The People of the State of New York, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Gulian C. Verplanck, William C. Bryant, Charles M. Leupp, Asher B. Durand, John F. Kensett, William Kemble and William H. Appleton, and such other persons as are now associated as "The Century," or may hereafter become associated with them, are hereby constituted a body corporate by the name of "The Century Association," to be located in the city of New-York, for the purpose of promoting the advancement of art and literature by establishing and maintaining a library, reading room and gallery of art, and by such other means as shall be expedient and proper for that purpose.

§ 2. The said corporation shall have the power to make and adopt a constitution and by-laws, rules and regulations, for the admission, suspension and expulsion of its members, and their government, the election of its officers and to define their duties, and for the safe keeping and protection of its property and funds, and from time to time to alter or repeal such constitution, by-laws, rules and regulations. The seven persons named in the first section of this act shall constitute the trustees and managers until others are elected in their places.

§ 3. The said corporation may purchase and hold or lease any real and personal estate; provided that they shall not hold any real estate the value of which shall exceed the sum of fifty thousand dollars.

§ 4. The said corporation shall possess the general powers, and be subject to the general restrictions and liabilities prescribed in the third title of the eighteenth chapter of the first part of the Revised Statutes.

§ 5. The Legislature may at any time alter or repeal this act.

§ 6. This act shall take effect immediately.

By a special Act of the Legislature, passed March 29th, 1883, the Association was authorized to hold real estate to the value of three hundred thousand dollars. This was superseded by the general Corporation Law, under which the Association is entitled to hold real estate to the value of three million dollars.

ARTICLE I

THIS Association shall be composed of authors, artists, and amateurs of letters and the fine arts.

ARTICLE II

§ 1. The officers shall be a President, two Vice-Presidents, a Secretary, and a Treasurer; and there shall also be sixteen Trustees. Such officers, together with the Trustees, shall be a Board of Management. Of the Trustees not less than three shall be authors, not less than three artists, and not more than eight amateurs. No person shall be eligible as a trustee for more than three years in succession.

The officers and trustees shall be chosen at each annual meeting by ballot, and shall continue in office until the next annual meeting, or until their successors are elected.

§ 2. The President shall preside at the meetings of the Association; he shall also be Chairman of the Board of Management; he shall, with the Secretary, sign all written contracts and obligations of the Association, and he shall perform such other duties as the Board of Management of the Association may assign him.

The First Vice-President, or in his absence the Second Vice-President, shall discharge the duties of the President in case of his absence or during a vacancy in his office.

§ 3. The Secretary shall keep minutes of all meetings of the Association and of the Board of Management; shall notify members of their election, issue notices for all meetings of the Association, and conduct the correspondence and keep the records; which records and correspondence shall be open to the inspection of members at all reasonable times.

§ 4. The Treasurer shall collect and, under the direction of the Board of Management, disburse the funds. He shall report at the monthly meeting in February and oftener if required, on the state of the funds. His accounts shall be audited by a select committee of three, appointed or elected at the monthly meeting next previous to the annual meeting.

In case of the absence, disability, or death of the Treasurer, the President or the Board of Management shall have power to appoint a Treasurer pro tem, to serve during such absence or disability, or, in case of the death of the Treasurer, until the vacancy shall have been filled.

§ 5. Any officer or trustee may be removed, for cause, at any meeting of the Association, upon due notice, and any vacancy in an office shall be filled for the residue of the term by the Board of Management.

ARTICLE III

Of the Powers of the Association at its General Meetings

§ 1. All the corporate powers remain vested in the Association, and they may be exercised at any regular meeting, subject to the restrictions herein contained.

§ 2. No resolution making any disposition by way of sale, lease, or mortgage, of any of the property of the Association, or whereby an expenditure of more than two hundred and fifty dollars is or may be incurred, shall be passed except at a meeting at which sixty members shall be present, and two-thirds of those present shall vote in favor thereof, nor until the resolution shall have been referred to and considered by the Board of Management and they shall have reported their opinion thereon, which report shall be made at the monthly meeting next after the reference.

ARTICLE IV

Of the Board of Management

§ 1. The Board of Management shall have general charge of the affairs, funds, and property of the Association. It shall be their duty to carry out the objects and purposes thereof; and to this end they may exercise all the powers of the Association, subject to the Constitution and By-Laws, and to such action as the Association may take at its monthly or annual meetings.

§ 2. The Board of Management shall have regular meetings as often as once in each month from November to June inclusive, and they shall submit a report of the affairs of the Association at each annual meeting, and shall report at other times if required. Seven members shall constitute a quorum.

§ 3. The Board of Management may invite distinguished strangers visiting the City to partake of the privileges of the Association during their stay. [Amended December 3, 1921.]

§ 4. The Board of Management shall have the power to remit the dues of any member, for such cause and for such period as in their judgment may be advisable and proper. During that period such member shall not be counted in the limitation of members. [Amended December 3, 1921.]

ARTICLE V

Of Committees and their Duties

§ 1. Committee on Admissions. The Committee on Admissions shall consist of twenty-one members, who shall be chosen by ballot at the annual meeting, and shall hold office until their successors shall be elected. At the annual meeting in January, 1889, seven members of the Committee shall be elected to serve three years, seven two years, and seven one year. At each subsequent annual meeting seven members shall be chosen to serve three years. No member of the Committee shall be eligible for re-election within one year of the expiration of three years' service on said Committee. Vacancies by death, or otherwise, may be filled by the Committee until the next annual meeting. They shall fix their own time and place of meeting. Eleven members shall constitute a quorum.

§ 2. Other Committees. There shall be a House Committee and a Committee on Literature, each composed of three members of the Board of Management. There shall be an Art Committee composed of at least seven members, of whom at least three shall be members of the Board of Management. These Committees shall be appointed by the Board of Management within two weeks after each annual meeting. The Board may provide for the appointment of additional members of any of said Committees from time to time; such additional members need not be members of the Board. The particular duties of each of said Committees shall be defined by the By-Laws. [Amended March 3, 1934.]

ARTICLE VI

Of the Members

§ 1. The number of resident members is limited to one thousand. [Amended February 6, 1892.]

§ 2. Any member who, having paid the entrance fee and the dues for one year, is absent from the United States for a continuous period of not less than twelve months shall, during his absence, be exempt from the payment of dues, provided that he shall have given to the Treasurer previous notice in writing of his intention to be absent. Absentees shall not be counted in the limitation of the number of resident members. In case the return of absentees shall increase the number above the limit prescribed, no new resident members shall be chosen until the number shall be reduced by resignation or otherwise below such limit.

§ 3. There shall also be a class of non-resident members, not exceeding seven hundred in number, to consist of persons residing permanently more than fifty miles from New York City Hall, and having no office or place of business in New York. [Amended March 1, 1945.]

All members of the Armed Forces of the United States, who are now members or who may be elected to membership, may at their option be held to be non-resident members during their active service. [Amended March 1, 1945.]

An artist member who has paid an entrance fee as a resident member may at his option elect to be classified as a non-resident member and be liable for annual dues as such but shall remain entitled to all the privileges of the Association, including the right of voting and of holding office. [Amended April 3, 1947.]

§ 4. No person shall be admitted as a member of the Association unless he shall have been recommended by the Committee on Admissions, on the proposal of two members not belonging to that Committee.

The name of every person proposed for admission, whether as a resident or a non-resident member, with his residence and the names of the members proposing him, shall be posted in the rooms at least fifteen days before being acted upon by the Committee. The Committee shall receive and consider all communications in reference to the persons proposed, and make careful examination as to their qualifications; it shall pass upon each name separately, and two negative votes shall be a rejection of the candidate. The proceedings of the Committee shall be secret and confidential.

At every monthly meeting of the Association the Committee shall furnish printed lists, properly classified, of the names of the persons recommended for admission, not exceeding twenty in number, and the Association shall then proceed to vote by depositing the lists with tellers appointed by the Chairman. The erasure from the list of any name shall be considered a vote in the negative. If negative votes be cast against any candidate to the number of one-fifth of the votes cast, his candidacy shall be referred back to the Committee on Admissions for further consideration. If the candidacy of such person again comes before the Association, negative votes cast against such person to the number of one-fifth of the votes cast shall exclude him from membership. [Amended January 8, 1953.]

No person so excluded shall be eligible for election within twelve months thereafter.

§ 5. Non-resident members may at any time, on and after the 30th April, 1896, be transferred from the list of resident members upon application in writing to the Treasurer. The members so transferred shall not be entitled to reimbursement of any part of the entrance fee. [Amended February 1896.]

Non-resident members shall be entitled to all the privileges of the Association, except the right of voting and of holding office. They shall be subject to the Constitution and By-Laws and to all the regulations of the Association.

§ 6. The Secretary and Treasurer, two weeks previous to each monthly meeting, shall determine the number of vacancies in each class of members and certify the same to the Committee on Admissions.

§ 7. An entrance fee of one hundred and fifty dollars shall be paid by each resident member, and of one hundred dollars by each non-resident member.

Such payment shall be made within thirty days after notice in writing of his election; or if within thirty days after such notice the member gives written notice to the Treasurer of his desire to do so, such payment may be made in four instalments, each of one quarter of the amount of the entrance fee; the first instalment shall be payable within thirty days after notice of his election, the second instalment within six months after such notice, the third instalment within twelve months after such notice, and the fourth instalment within eighteen months after such notice.

In default of such payment of the entrance fee, or the first instalment thereof, within thirty days after such notice, the member shall be deemed to have declined his election unless the Board of Management determines otherwise.

If any member fails to pay a subsequent instalment of his entrance fee when due, he shall be notified thereof in writing, and unless such instalment shall be paid within one month after such notice he shall thereupon cease to be a member unless the Board of Management determines otherwise. [Amended January 14, 1939.]

§ 8. The annual dues of resident members shall be one hundred twenty-five dollars, payable semi-annually in advance on the first days of May and November; and the annual dues of non-resident members shall be sixty-two and one-half dollars, payable on admission, and on each first day of May thereafter. [Amended March 6, 1947.]

The dues of all newly-elected members shall be computed proportionally from the first day of the month succeeding their election.

When the dues of any member shall remain unpaid for the space of three months, the Treasurer shall cause him to be notified that, unless the same be paid within one month thereafter, his membership will cease; and in case such dues shall not be paid pursuant to such notice, or such default be accounted for to the Board of Management, he shall thereupon cease to be a member.

In case any member of the non-resident class other than an artist member shall come to reside within the radius above named, or shall establish an office or place of business in the City of New York, it shall be his duty forthwith to notify the Treasurer of the Association in writing of such change, and he shall then be deemed a resident member with annual dues accordingly, and unless he has already paid the entrance fee of a resident member, he shall also pay to the Treasurer within thirty days the additional amount of entrance fees necessary to constitute him a resident member; in default of such payment he shall cease to be a member. [Amended March 6, 1947.]

It shall be the duty of each member to keep the Treasurer informed of his address.

§ 9. Honorary members may be elected from the membership of the Association on the recommendation of the Board of Management, at a regular monthly meeting, by unanimous vote by ballot. No more than one honorary member shall be chosen in any one year. Honorary members shall be exempt from the payment of annual dues and shall be entitled to all the privileges of the Association except that of holding office.

§ 10. Any member may be suspended or expelled for violation of the Constitution or By-Laws, or for any offence or misconduct which may be deemed sufficient to warrant such suspension or expulsion, by a vote, at a monthly meeting, of three-fourths of the members present, one month's previous notice having been given to the member charged. It shall be the duty of the Board of Management to report any member for action under this rule.

The Board of Management shall also have the power for a like cause, by the affirmative vote of eleven (11) of its members, after a hearing has been granted on one month's previous notice, to suspend any member from all privileges as such member indefinitely, pending further action; but any member affected thereby may require the resolution of suspension to be reported to the Association.

Membership may also be forfeited by failure to pay any indebtedness to the Association, in such manner as may be prescribed by the By-Laws.

§ 11. In the rooms of the Association, betting of any kind is strictly prohibited. [Amended November 5, 1927.]

ARTICLE VII

Of Meetings

§ 1. There shall be an annual meeting of the Association for the election of officers and members and other business. It shall be held on the second Thursday of January of each year, at 9 o'clock P.M.

§ 2. There shall be monthly meetings of the Association for the election of members and other business. They shall be held on the first Thursday of November, December, February, March, April, May and June at 9 o'clock P.M. [Amended June 3, 1941.]

§ 3. Special meetings may be called by the Board of Management; and they shall call a meeting at any time on the written request of ten members, which request shall specify the object of the meeting.

§ 4. The number of members necessary to constitute a quorum at an annual meeting shall be fifty, and at a monthly or special meeting shall be thirty.

ARTICLE VIII

Of Amendments

§ 1. This Constitution shall commence and take effect on the second Saturday of January, 1870, and the previous Constitution thereupon shall cease.

§ 2. No alteration or amendment of this Constitution shall be made unless the same be proposed at a previous regular meeting, and then posted in a conspicuous place in the rooms of the Association and the text of the same sent to each voting member with the notice of the meeting at which it may be considered, and be finally adopted at a subsequent meeting by the votes of two-thirds of the members present at the passage thereof.

§ 3. By-Laws, Rules, and Regulations, not inconsistent with the Charter or this Constitution, may be made, adopted, altered, or repealed at any monthly or annual meeting; provided, the proposed by-law, rule, regulation, alteration, or repeal shall have been proposed at a previous monthly meeting, and then posted in a conspicuous place in the rooms of the Association and the text of the same sent to each voting member with the notice of the meetings at which it may be considered, and shall be adopted by the votes of two-thirds of the members present at the passage thereof.

BY-LAWS

§ 1. No book, journal, paper, picture, statue, or other work of art, the property of the Association, shall be taken from the rooms, under any pretext whatever, except by authority of the Board of Management.

§ 2. On the first day of each month or as soon thereafter as may be practicable, there shall be sent to each member notice of his indebtedness to the Association on the last day of the preceding month, and if the same is not paid on or before the fifteenth day of the month the names of the members so in default, together with the amounts due, shall be posted on a separate sheet in the hall.

In case any such indebtedness shall not be discharged at the expiration of a month from the date of such first notice, a second notice shall be mailed to the member in default, notifying him that further credit will not be extended to him until his indebtedness is discharged, and that in case he continues in such default for ten days thereafter, he will be excluded from all privileges of the Association until such indebtedness is paid, and such member shall thereupon, upon the expiration of such ten days, be so excluded, and notice to that effect shall thereupon be posted on a separate sheet in the hall.

At any time during such exclusion the Board of Management may declare the membership of such delinquent to be forfeited, and his name shall thereupon be dropped from the roll of members.

But before such action shall be taken by the Board of Management, it shall cause a copy of this By-Law to be mailed to the delinquent member.

A copy of this By-Law shall be sent with such second notice.

§ 3. A suggestion book shall be kept at the rooms in which every member is authorized to enter, under his signature, any complaint as to the management of the Association, and any suggestions he may desire to make.

§ 4. Visitors:

(a) A member may introduce a guest to the rooms of the Association for one day by entering the name and address of such guest and the date in the book to be kept for that purpose. This privilege may be suspended for any particular day by the House Committee. A member may not introduce the same person as a daily guest more than twice in the calendar year, and may not introduce more than one daily guest on the same day.

(b) A member may invite visitors to the Art Gallery during any Art Exhibition of the Association through signing cards of invitation printed for that purpose, but such cards of invitation shall not entitle visitors to pass to other parts of the house.

(c) A member may introduce guests to the private dining room when he has reserved that room for an entertainment.

(d) The House Committee, at the request in writing of a member, may extend the privileges of the Association for a total period of one month in any twelve months to a guest whose residence is more than fifty miles from the City Hall. Extension of this time may, on the recommendation of the House Committee, be granted by the Board of Management.

A member may not obtain from the House Committee such privileges for more than one guest at a time, nor for the same guest more than once in a period of twelve months.

(e) Guests while enjoying the privileges of the Association as provided in paragraphs (a) and (d) are on the same footing as non-resident members, except that they may not introduce visitors and may not be present at any business meeting of the Association. Nor shall the House Committee grant the same privileges to the same guest more than once in a period of twelve months.

(f) A member who obtains admission to the club-house for a guest becomes responsible for the conduct of such guest and for any indebtedness of such guest to the Association.

(g) The Board of Management may modify these rules to meet special cases.

(h) It is the duty of the House Committee to enforce the provisions of this section and promptly to report to the Board of Management all cases of persistent violation thereof.

(i) In case of violation of any of the provisions of this section, the House Committee may summarily suspend the privileges accorded therein with regard to any member or visitor for a period not exceeding ten days, and in all cases of violation the Board of Management may suspend such privileges for such period as in their discretion the interest of the Association may require.

(j) In addition to the powers herein above granted, the Board of Management may provide for the invitation of authors, artists, and composers of music to be guests of the Association. Such invitations shall be for the term of one year but shall be renewable; and the total number so invited shall not exceed fifty at any one time. [Amended November 5, 1942.]

§ 5. The House Committee shall have the charge of furnishing supplies, employing stewards and servants, keeping the rooms and premises of the Association in order for use, regulating the place, character and the extent of recreation and amusements in the club-house, and enforcing the rule as to admission of visitors. [Amended November 5, 1927.]

The care of newspapers and current periodicals is entrusted to the House Committee.

§ 6. The Committee on Literature shall have charge of the Library, and of the supply of books, and shall subscribe for periodicals and newspapers. Loud or continuous conversation shall not be carried on in the Library, nor, except on Thursday nights, shall refreshments be served therein.

§ 7. The Committee on Art shall have charge of all works of art owned or possessed by the Association; and it shall be their duty to make arrangements for exhibition, at monthly and annual meetings, of the works of artists of the Association, and other works of art, at their discretion. They shall keep a catalogue of the works of art owned or possessed by the Association, or exhibited in its rooms, and shall record therein every such work, with the name of the author, the title of the work, and the time of exhibition. The Committee on Art shall have charge of all decorations of the rooms. No work of art shall be accepted as a gift, or purchased by the Association, until the Committee on Art has made a report thereon to the Board of Management.

§ 8. The expenditures of the House Committee, and the Committees on Literature and Art, shall be limited to such sums as the Board of Management shall prescribe.

§ 9. A perfect list of members, officers, and committees shall be kept posted up in the rooms of the Association; and such list shall be corrected under the direction of the Treasurer and Secretary, from time to time, as changes occur.

§ 10. The above By-Laws shall go into effect on the second Saturday of January, 1870.

§ 11. A Nominating Committee shall annually be constituted as follows. The Board of Management shall at its last spring meeting propose as candidates for such committee the names of seven members of the Club, of whom two shall be members of the Board of Management, not eligible for re-election, and two shall be members of the Committee on Admissions. The names shall be posted in the club-house at least twenty days before the November monthly meeting of the Club. At any time not later than ten days before the November monthly meeting, additional candidates may be proposed for the Committee, provided that in each case the proposal, indorsed by twenty-five resident members, be presented in writing to the Secretary of the Club. [Amended May 1, 1952.]

All the names proposed by either of the above methods shall be printed in a single list, the names proposed by the Board of Management being designated by an asterisk. From this list, which shall be distributed at the monthly meeting in November, the Club shall elect by ballot the Nominating Committee. Each member may vote for not more than seven names on the list, and the seven candidates receiving the highest number of votes shall be declared elected. [Amended May 1, 1952.]

The Nominating Committee shall at the earliest practicable moment post in the club-house the names of candidates for all the positions to be filled. Additional candidates for such positions or any of them, may be nominated, and shall be posted, provided that in each case the nomination, indorsed by fifty resident members, be presented in writing to the Secretary of the Club not later than one week before the Annual Meeting.

The Secretary of the Club shall prepare printed lists of all candidates named by either of the aforesaid methods, the names to be grouped under the titles of the positions to be filled; the candidates for Trustees to be arranged in three groups, designated respectively as Authors, Artists, and Amateurs, and all names proposed by the Nominating Committee to be designated by an asterisk. These lists shall be distributed to members at the Annual Meeting, and shall serve as ballots in the election, provided that nothing herein be construed to restrict the right of any member to vote by means of written names for persons whose names do not appear in print.

§ 12. An Investment Committee consisting of four members and the Treasurer shall be appointed by the Board of Management annually. It shall be the duty of this committee to supervise the investments of the Club and to advise the Treasurer with respect to the purchase and sale of its investments.

HOUSE RULES

I

Admittance to the club-house cannot be claimed after one o'clock A.M.

II

There will be no breakfast on Sundays.
Week days, breakfast will start at 8 o'clock in the morning.

III

Week days, the Dining Room will be closed at nine o'clock in the evening.

IV

THE COMMITTEE ON ADMISSIONS

ADOPTED BY THE ASSOCIATION, DECEMBER 2, 1893;
AMENDED, DECEMBER 4, 1952

I

THE name, residence, and profession or occupation of every candidate for membership in this Association shall be entered in the Book of Candidates kept for this purpose; such entry shall be accompanied by the signatures of the proposer and seconder. The Secretary of the Committee may make such entry when letters of recommendation have been received from both proposer and seconder.

II

The proposer of a candidate shall send promptly a letter of recommendation to the Secretary of the Committee on Admissions, giving the name, place of residence, and profession or occupation of the candidate, with such statement of his qualifications as the proposer may deem proper. The seconder shall likewise send a letter of recommendation.

III

A candidacy shall be deemed completed as of the date when the entry in the Book of Candidates shall have been made as provided in Rule I of the Committee and when the Secretary of the Committee shall have received the letters of recommendation from the proposer and seconder. The Secretary shall thereupon enter in the Book of Candidates the date of the completed candidacy, and shall add the candidate's name to the posted list.

THE CENTURY MEMORIALS

BY THE HISTORIAN

Ernest Schwefel Ballard~March 18, 1952

Ernest Ballard was born in Philadelphia, but he came to Chicago in 1915 and began the practice of law there. He was a remarkable lawyer, and he came swiftly to the full maturity of his great gifts.

Whether in practice before commissions in commerce cases, or before the appellate courts in corporate matters, or later in dealing with the exceedingly intricate questions, both legal and practical, that sprang from the new storm of labor disputes, he was an unquestioned master. His penetrating power of analysis that took him straight to the heart of a new question, his use of language to express thought so lucidly that not a word or phrase seemed other than inevitable in its place, the contagious quality of his courage, and his infinite resourcefulness made him a tower of strength to those who relied upon his counsel. No one who has ever seen him walk into a room filled with anxious faces can forget the lift in spirit which everyone felt at the sound of his crisp voice or the smile that shone from his eyes.

But his rich and full life found its highest form of expression in the causes that challenged him in the world that is apart from business and professions. Whether it was the Council of Social Agencies, the Glenwood School for Boys, the English Speaking Union, or the Winnetka Schools, he accepted the responsibility of leadership with a confidence and vigor that inspired all those about him. Above all, his church was closest to his heart. For twenty years he served as a member of the Vestry of Christ Church of Winnetka and during much of that time as its Senior Warden. The fine spiritual quality of his deep religious faith revealed itself in every phase of his prodigiously active life, and it is fitting that his ashes rest in the churchyard which he himself prepared for his parish with such devoted care.

His death at the age of sixty-six loosed him from the bonds of an illness from which there was no escape. The King sent and delivered him; the Prince of the People let him go free.

Walter Van Dyke Bingham~July 7, 1952

Dr. Bingham was born in Iowa in 1880 and educated at Beloit, Chicago, Berlin, and Harvard. He began his professional life as a mathematician, soon was attracted to the mathematics of music, and from that he gradually shifted over to the psychology of music—that is, why one sequence of notes is a melody while another is mere noise. So the musicologist became a psychologist and ultimately devoted himself to the problem of picking out the people of ability and finding the jobs into which they fit best. His first book was "Studies in Melody"; his best known, "Aptitudes and Aptitude Testing." Many of the present leaders in that field were his students at Dartmouth or at Carnegie Tech (where he established the first department of applied psychology) or were the beneficiaries of his later work as head of the Personnel Research Foundation.

His principal work, however, was as a military psychologist. In the First World War he had been a Lieutenant Colonel in the personnel branch of the General Staff. Called back for the Second World War as chief psychologist in the Adjutant General's office (a post which he held until 1947, thereafter continuing as a consultant), he preferred to remain a civilian so that, as he said, he could talk to a corporal as he would to a general. "More than any other man," said Combat Forces Journal, "Walter Bingham contributed to the solution of the never-ending problems of keeping the square military pegs out of the round holes, and putting them into the square ones where they belong." When he died, he was working on tests that might pick out in advance the squarest pegs for the squarest of all holes—the men who would carry through an assault, come hell or high water.

Elected to the Century as a nonresident in 1949, he was always at the clubhouse on his visits to New York, and kept in constant contact with many of the other Centurions in Washington.

Allan B. A. Bradley~February 12, 1952

Allan Bradley graduated from Columbia in 1902 (he was president of his class) and from the Columbia Law School in 1905. He rowed on the University four-oared crew, and was a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

An admiralty lawyer, he came to be the leader of the admiralty bar of the City. His wife died in 1937, and after that he was around the Club a great deal. He used to sit at the end of the long table, and he was very pleasant company. He had an uncanny way of being right in controversial discussions, and one was happy to have him in support.

He was an ardent and very skillful fisherman; and he used to get away in the trout season and practice the art with some fellow disciples of Izaak Walton.

He was also a distinguished collector of Early American furniture, and some of his pieces are now in the American Wing of the Metropolitan Museum of Art. He was an authority on Duncan Phyfe furniture, and his opinion on it was highly valued.

In the practice of law he had the confidence of the courts and the respect of his opponents. He was devoid of guile and frankly told the whole truth no matter what the consequences.

William Harlowe Briggs~July 31, 1952

Bill Briggs brought to the companionship of the Century a combination of elements found in few men. Born in Kalamazoo, he lived as a child in South Dakota, where his father had a wheat farm in what were truly the pioneer days of the region, when the railroads were just pushing through. His first journalistic adventure was the establishment—at the ripe age of fifteen—of a newspaper at Ipswich, S.D., called The Leaflet. At twenty he was city editor of the Reporter-Gazette of Rockford, Illinois, and from there he went on to editorial work for the Hearst newspapers in Chicago and then in New York. In 1907 he came to Harper's Weekly, which was then published at the famous glass-and-iron headquarters on Franklin Square, and in 1908, at the age of thirty-two, he shifted once more, this time to the book editorial department of Harper & Brothers, with which he was to be connected for the ensuing forty-four years, part of that time as editor-in-chief.

Throughout his life he had a consuming interest in the theater. Not only was he a theater critic during his newspaper years in Chicago, but after that he assembled a considerable collection of theatrical lore, and he also wrote plays. In his later years he wrote a charming study of the Western plains life he had known in his youth, "Dakota in the Morning."

This variety of experience lent a special savor to his talk at the Century. He knew and understood books and authors, plays and the Broadway world, newspapers and newspapermen—and behind all this was the pioneer background and the flavor of a self-made man who had lifted himself by his own bootstraps and for whom life in literary Manhattan was a matter of hard-won and deeply appreciated choice. "I liked in him," says a member who especially enjoyed his company, "a sort of 'ranchman humor' which I can't define but felt, and which somehow reminded me of the cattlemen for whom I used to work in Montana." And another member recalls the gusto with which he told a railroad executive, from his first-hand knowledge, just how railroad building was done in the days when the rails were reaching out across the plains.

Bill Briggs particularly enjoyed the pre-luncheon gathering around the Century round table on a Saturday; there it was that his open friendliness, the cordiality of his midwestern voice, and the pungency of his observations were especially to be noted.

To any company he added mellowness and relish.

Donald Winchester Brown~December 21, 1952

Donald Brown was born in the City in 1910. He graduated from St. Marks School, Harvard, and the Columbia Law School, and he was a lawyer. His early adventures included serving in the Second World War in the Army as a Major of ski troops and going to South America as an attaché of the State Department. After that, he taught in the Law School at the University of Chicago.

In 1951 he and his wife came to live in Cooperstown, with which Brown was familiar from his childhood. He was fascinated by the idea of practicing law in a small community, and he opened an office over the local dry-goods shop on Main Street. He got off to an excellent start, and in a year had almost more to do than he could handle. All this was cut short by his sudden death in an automobile accident while he was driving from New York to Cooperstown.

Brown was only forty-two, and it is tragic that he died so young. He was becoming important in the community activities at Cooperstown and would have been a most useful citizen. He had a love for skiing and mountain climbing and was full of life and energy and enterprise. He was true to his own ideals and undeterred by pressures to be ordinary.

Samuel Alburtus Brown~March 16, 1952

Brown graduated from New York University College of Medicine in 1894, and then served his internship at Bellevue Hospital. Thereafter he was continuously identified with these institutions. He was appointed to the medical college faculty in 1897, and in 1916 he was named its Dean.

In 1932 he retired as Professor of Therapeutics and as Dean and was made Dean Emeritus. He was then appointed to the New York University Council and became chairman of the Committee on Medicine and Dentistry. He fully understood the significance of correlating a medical school with an active hospital, which was already being worked out in the City by Columbia and by Cornell, and he devoted himself to organizing a great medical center based on New York University Medical College and Bellevue Hospital. His labors in this connection were of the utmost value, and in 1948 he became Vice-Chairman of the new Medical Center.

Dr. Brown had a magic gift for friendship. It will be remembered that Cicero insisted that friendship can exist only between good men; and he says that good men are those "whose actions and lives leave no question as to their honor, purity, equity, and liberality; who are free from greed, lust and violence, and who have the courage of their convictions."

These requirements Brown fulfilled, and the loyalty and number of his friends were no accident. He was pleasant, kind, and just, and he was one of the most useful citizens of the great City.

Eugene Hugh Byrne~September 23, 1952

Professor Byrne was born in Wisconsin, and in 1903 he graduated from the State University there. He became a Harrison Fellow in history at the University of Pennsylvania in 1910, and after that he taught history at Wisconsin until 1931, when he was appointed Professor of Medieval History at Columbia. This post brought him to the City and the Century, and he held it until he retired, as Professor Emeritus, in 1949.

He was an outstanding authority in his field. Particularly was he interested in medieval trade and shipping, and his research at Genoa produced entirely novel information about business methods in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries and commerce in the Mediterranean.

He gave courses at Barnard as well as at Columbia, and for the former he is, for some reason, especially remembered. He was popular with the students, and he had a happy faculty of making friends without regard to age. His interests were broad, and he seemed able to reconcile things not easily reconcilable and to be congenial with a surprising variety of his fellows. His seminars and lectures were precise and accurate statements of facts; but more than that, they were colored by and glowed with a joy of living and an understanding of the ways of humans that educated and stimulated his hearers so that they caught his enthusiasm and came to realize the brotherhood of man.

Edward Mortimer Chapman~May 25, 1952

The Reverend Edward M. Chapman graduated from Yale in 1884 and from the Yale Divinity School in 1890. From the beginning he was destined for the ministry, and he was an enthusiastic teacher.

For ten years he was lecturer in biblical literature at Connecticut College, and at times he was on the preaching staff at Yale and at Princeton. He wrote articles for the Yale Review, The Hibbert Journal, and the old Youth's Companion. The influence of religion on the young was a matter of intense interest to him, and he labored diligently in that field.

Nearly all his life he lived next the salt water, and he was a first-class sailor and an informed and tireless fisherman. He speaks of his father's oldest brother, for whom he had a great affection: "Uncle George took me fishing when I was far too young to go alone; and I took him when he was too old. A light went out on my horizon when he died."

Chapman was a consecrated vessel—kindly, simple, and wholly New England.

John Adams Church~November 10, 1952

John Church was elected in 1921. His father, two uncles, his father-in-law, and an uncle-in-law were all, at various times, Centurions.

Until the Second World War took him away from us to Washington, Church was at the Club almost daily. He was deeply devoted to it, and, in his later years when government work became so pressing, he was greatly missed.

He was a consulting mining engineer and a widely known authority on minerals. Early in his career, he worked in Mexico and Montana in connection with copper mines. Later he was associated with the Nichols Copper Company of New York. In 1941, he collaborated with Centurion Robert Peele on a revision of the "Mining Engineers Handbook."

When war came, he was appointed head of the copper and zinc branch of the War Production Board. In 1942, he was commissioned Major in the Army and acted as liaison officer between the Army and the WPB. In 1945, he went overseas on a mission to investigate German mineral resources. He left the army in 1946 with the rank of Colonel, and joined the Economic Cooperation Administration and the Defense Materials Procurement Agency.

During his years in New York when he was able to be so often at the Century, he always seemed to enjoy life to the full. He was a most companionable person with whom one could talk about almost anything and find his contribution interesting and valuable. Perhaps his greatest attachment outside his profession was to music, of which he knew much. He had the rare and wonderful quality of being able to hold peaceful discussions with those who disagreed with him, and, however different one's views might be, it was always instructive to talk to Jack Church.

He was tolerant, kind, and generous, greatly loved by his family, and respected and admired even by those who knew him only slightly.

Arthur Wilfred Clement~October 31, 1952

Clement graduated from Yale in 1900 and from New York Law School in 1902. He practiced law in the City all his life, and he became particularly expert in procedure and the law of common carriers.

He was exceedingly interested in art—especially in pottery—and he traveled all over the United States, Western Europe, and Central America collecting ceramics for the Brooklyn, the Metropolitan, and the Newark Museums. He lived in Brooklyn and was concerned that the tangible elements of culture be provided there.

By nature he was retiring, perhaps even shy; but he was a marvelous listener, stimulating the talkers to their best. When he himself talked, it was always well worth while, for he knew about the most astonishing variety of things—from Guatemalan textiles to Chinese pewter. He had a happy faculty for imparting information so that one imagined one had thought it out oneself.

He lectured and wrote articles on American furniture and ceramics, and also on the art of collecting and the art of research for the purpose of attribution. There is more to these matters than technical information, of course. All art is the expression of thoughts and ideals of the makers: those long dead, those of modern civilizations. Clement never wrote an "Ode on a Grecian Urn," but to these outward and visible signs of inward and spiritual ferment he brought the understanding that "beauty is truth, and truth beauty."

Lincoln Cromwell~February 8, 1952

Lincoln Cromwell graduated from Columbia in 1886 and from the Law School in 1889. He was admitted to the bar, but he never practiced law. Instead, he went into the business of factoring with Iselin & Co., and there he worked all his life.

He was one of the most useful citizens of the City. He was President of St. Luke's Hospital and of the Phi Beta Kappa Association, Senior Warden of Grace Church, Vice-President of the Citizens Union, and over the years he served on a dozen committees appointed from time to time by the Governor or the Mayor to deal with important problems affecting the public. Wherever honesty and ability were required men thought of him.

In the Century he served on the Auditing Committee, the Investment Committee, the Nominating Committee, and the Board of Managers. In all these varied posts his labors were characterized by friendly common sense and understanding. His very presence seemed to allay apprehension, and his obvious lack of guile bred confidence. At the same time he was always quite aware of the motives of those he dealt with, and his apparent simplicity cloaked a vigorous and sophisticated grasp of what was going on.

He used to play cow-boy pool in the basement. He was not a great expert, but he was so pleasant and jolly that he was always in demand and gave and got a vast deal of innocent amusement. Everyone was always glad to see him; nobody stood in awe of him, and he seemed to tease the shyest member out of his shell and provoke him to talk and laughter.

He was a very perfect, gentle knight.

Bridgham Curtis~February 18, 1953

Bridgham Curtis graduated from Harvard in 1899 and from the Columbia Law School in 1902. He practiced law in New York all his life. In 1919 he was taken into the firm of MacFarland and Monroe, two colorful Centurions well remembered by older members of the bar to this day.

Curtis was a sensitive, highly cultivated man, quite unsuited to the acquisitive materialism of Wall Street. He remarked that the performances in the trials in the Supreme Court were degraded and revolting, and they certainly are; but most lawyers have endured the system so long that they are no longer disgusted; they simply accept silly, simian behavior as part of the inevitable phenomena of humanity.

Curtis had the faculty of regarding himself objectively, and he was humorously aware of his own nonconformity and the puzzlement it created among the earnest go-getters. He was wonderful company—unruffled, understanding, and alert. He was passionately interested in music, and was one of the founders of the Schola Cantorum and a member of the guarantors' committee of the Philharmonic.

Here and there are men who must have been put on earth by an all-wise Providence to make people think. Some of these shake the world—like Socrates—and others are the salt of life, without which living would be drab and civilization degenerate into a great bray in the kitchen. Of this company Curtis was not least but honored of them all.

James Freeman Curtis~November 24, 1952

Curtis graduated from Harvard in 1899 and from Harvard Law School in 1903. He practiced law in Massachusetts and after three years became Assistant Attorney General of that Commonwealth. In 1909 President Taft appointed him Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, and after that he was counsel and Deputy Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, a project in which he was deeply interested.

Jim was a thoroughly competent lawyer, filled with common sense and resourceful in meeting problems. In public posts and in private practice he was poignantly aware not only of what was legal but also of what would work. It was not enough to be right. The ignorance and prejudices of the general were constant factors which must be considered.

But he was much more than a good lawyer. When he was an undergraduate, he was intercollegiate golf champion, and he played first-class golf up till the last ten years of his life. He was strong and ruddy in appearance, his eyes twinkled, he had a kind of surprised expression, and his voice had a bell-like quality that was very pleasant. Somehow he got a good deal of money together; and his home in Roslyn was a show place where sports and civilized people foregathered and had a marvelously good time together. Jim was the alchemist, the catalyst, who lent tone and quality to the whole.

He did not join the Century till 1941, and shortly after that very great misfortunes descended upon him. He had two sons, and they were both killed in the war. His health was poor. He had to have a leg amputated; and hardly was he adjusted to this when it became necessary to amputate the other. Then he died.

Jim had great understanding. He knew the ways of the world, and he accepted the universe. He never felt sorry for himself. Like Ulysses, he was a part of all that he met, and he took the bad weather with the good. Age did not wither him, nor custom stale his infinite variety.

James Stewart Cushman~March 19, 1952

Jim Cushman was born in New York, and when he was eighty years old, he died in the City. His long life was filled with a truly astonishing variety of interests, including the ownership and active management of an exceedingly profitable stationery business.

But Jim was much more than a successful merchant. When he was young, he was a first-rate tennis player, and for many years he was Chairman of the Tennis Committee of the Newport Casino—all through the Golden Age when the international matches were played there and one had to be criminally rich or belong to the decadent nobility of Europe to get a seat. Jim had a wonderful time, and he was so amusing and pleasant and competent that everybody liked him and had confidence in him.

He got warmed up about the difficulty "white collar" men and women had in finding suitable places to live, and in 1916 he founded the Allerton chain of moderately priced club hotels in New York, Cleveland, and Chicago. The chain was named for a Mayflower ancestor of Jim's, Mary Allerton. This was an entirely unique undertaking, and Jim was given well-deserved credit for it.

He did a lot of other generous things, too, including continual labor for the blind, for the East Side Settlement House, and for other welfare projects. But he will be remembered mostly because he was a decent, reliable man, most excellent company, and the kindest person in the world.

Henry Drysdale Dakin~February 10, 1952

Dr. Dakin was born in London and graduated from Victoria University in Manchester, England, in 1901. He held honorary degrees from Yale, Heidelberg, and Leeds Universities.

He was a great research chemist. In the First World War

"Dakin's Solution" became a familiar phrase in the trenches and at home, and it was the miracle drug of that generation.

Dakin showed the most wonderful ingenuity and resourcefulness when, after having taught the surgeons in the First World War how to make hypochlorite solutions useful in the treatment of wounds, he bludgeoned the British Admiralty into allowing him to equip the Aquatania—then engaged in transfer of the wounded from Gallipoli back to Britain—with a huge tank for the electrolytic conversion of the sodium chloride of sea water into sodium hypochlorite. It then became possible to disinfect and deodorize the whole ship and to transform its stench of purulent wounds into wholesomeness.

He was, however, no ordinary scientist. He had a marvelously stocked and disciplined mind, and the native kindliness and generosity of his spirit were enlivened by a gift of incisive wit which won him the affectionate admiration of all who came to know him well.

It is related that when a candidate was being sought for the professorship of biochemistry in Oxford University, Sir Charles Sherrington approached Dakin with the query whether he would consider accepting the post. His declination was phrased in some such language as this: He felt obliged to decline the great honor because he felt sure that Oxford University could not support him in the style to which Mrs. Dakin had accustomed him.

Jo Davidson~January 2, 1952

Jo Davidson was born on the lower East Side of New York in 1883 and was named Joseph by his parents. From that time on he was called Jo.

When he was sixteen, he won a scholarship at the Art

Students' League. He began to model in clay. He got himself to the Beaux Arts in Paris—with considerable help from interested onlookers—but he could not apply himself to copying plaster casts all day. He left school, worked all alone, and very nearly starved to death. Then he was given a Hallgarten scholarship, and he slowly got going. He became the premier portraitist-sculptor of his time.

No modern sculptor has been more successful in creating enduring images of his contemporaries, and no modern artist worked with more energy and so wide a range of interest. He was both a great portraitist and a great personality: his own massive, bearded face became as familiar a figure in American life as the faces of many of his famous subjects. He worked in the United States, in France, in Spain, and in Israel, and wherever he went he created figures with the vividness of life and the durability of stone.

He liked to refer to himself as a "plastic reporter," for he found his inspiration in the people and events he knew firsthand, rather than in remote subjects. There were many such people and events, for Davidson lived a full life that carried him beyond the realm of art into political activities, possibly beyond his understanding. He was fond of saying that energy rather than talent was the determining factor in an artist's success; certainly he possessed both in abundance.

He became kind of a legend, a superman who moved from New York to Paris to London, endlessly busy with commissions—tireless, talkative, astonishing. Tradition rarely offered let or hindrance to his picturesque march along the road of the individualist. He was free the way Walt Whitman was free—untrammeled and unafraid.

Harvey Nathaniel Davis~December 3, 1952

Harvey N. Davis graduated from Brown in 1901. His father was Professor of Mathematics there, and later Harvey taught physics at Brown and at Harvard. In 1928 he became president of Stevens Institute of Technology, and he kept it solvent and immensely useful, even through the period of financial depression, until he retired in 1951.

In conversation he was disarming and exceedingly engaging. But for all his charm he was a master in the arts of debate: lucid, logical, alert, wily, explicit, and well informed. Before a thousand, or in his own faculty room, or with an audience of one, he could be counted on to marshall his questions in a just sequence, so comprehendingly and precisely that from the answer to a first question one came inevitably to the answer to the final question. He was no Platonist; indeed, his temper was more that of an Aristotle; but his method was Socratic.

A job of research, he would say, is half done when you ask the right questions. That was no more true on the campus than in his Office for Research and Development in the War Production Board. Youngsters and Nobel laureates found him a keenly interested and, sometimes to their surprise, an enlightening consultant. He took the student as seriously as he took the scientist. He gave each a new slant on his particular problem.

Nor were his views narrowly technical. He was a mathematician and a physicist before he was an engineer. When a Board of Regents' questionnaire on engineering curricula called for an arbitrary distinction between technical and nontechnical subjects of instruction, he grunted: "Put down English, History, and Mathematics under 'Technical'; and under 'Nontechnical' put everything else." Twenty-five years ago, and five or six years in advance of other engineering educators, he opened up the curriculum of his college to make more room for economics, psychology, and the humanities. "Imagine it!" said a visitor from an arts faculty after an evening of talk, "A college president, and an engineer at that, who can think in terms of aesthetics!"

Even in academic ceremonies, his sense of dignity gave humor a chance, and in the comfortable company of friends, as at the Century, his humor left fair and dignified room for serious talk.

Johnston de Forest~November 25, 1952

Johnston de Forest lived at Cold Spring Harbor; and, like many of the denizens of Long Island, he did not get around to the Club with the regularity of members who live in the City. Every day he came to the Down Town Club for lunch, but the end of the day would see him out of the City.

Near Cold Spring Harbor is the Seawanhaka Corinthian Yacht Club, a great sailing center. Of all the members, de Forest's reputation as a small-boat sailor was second to none. He was so successful in races that he was known as "the old fox of Long Island Sound." In 1931 he took his eight-meter boat Priscilla III to Scotland, where he won the Clyde Fortnight series.

De Forest was a practicing lawyer. He was admitted to the Bar in 1899, and entered his father's firm, de Forest Brothers; he was counsel to the firm when he died. He was also a banker, and an astute and successful real estate operator. But it was in his public services that he shone particularly. He was a fellow in perpetuity of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, of which his father was president for many years, and he was a director of the Presbyterian Hospital. These two institutions are under infinite obligation to him for the years of selfless service which he devoted to them.

De Forest was a modest and gentle person. Like many of the rest of us, he became deaf when he got along in years. This is a disconcerting experience. It makes one shy and solitary, and it has other curious collateral effects. He bore this cross philosophically, but it interfered with work at board meetings and with casual conversations at lunch. Yet it gives one more time to read and think without interruption.

De Forest was an old-fashioned, honorable gentleman. He was born to a position of power, but that is only the guinea's stamp; he was true gold for all that.

John Dewey~June 1, 1952

John Dewey graduated from the University of Vermont in 1879 and took his Ph.D at Johns Hopkins in 1884. He was one of the great philosophers of the twentieth century—perhaps the greatest—and he left his mark on formal education all over the world.

He was Professor of Philosophy at Columbia from 1904 to 1930 and a tremendous power in Teachers College as well. He carried into education his conviction that experience (doing) is the best of all teachers, and this led him into the experiments in "progressive schools" which some of his disciples carried to extremes of "self-expression" that were patently absurd.

He was a socialist in politics, and there was a so-called "Dewey Group" which embraced some responsible liberals and also some pretty comical characters with more enthusiasm than discretion. The Group lived and moved under Dr. Dewey's aegis, and derived a color of respectability and importance from this association, which some of them exploited rather severely. For instance, they involved the old giant in a moot trial at Washington in which he exonerated Trotsky of the charges brought by Stalin. Dewey was a good crusader, but this was silly.

His vast learning and enormous output of lectures, books, and essays stagger the imagination of the ordinary mortal. He was always an advocate of action, and, like his master William James, he tested his beliefs by their practical consequences and insisted that this was the only true test of ideas. And yet in practical politics he was as naïve as a cleric—although he accepted the universe without protest.

In manner he was courteous and mild, though exceedingly persistent. His enthusiasm was infectious. In one year he disposed of a formidable pronunciamento by President Butler as "a childish point of view," and of an attack by President Hutchins as an "idea completely reactionary and fatal to the whole democratic outlook." Having thus clipped the extreme right and left wings of the enemy, he was repudiated by the educational forces of the center who were thrown into confusion by the totally unexpected direction of the retorts. But he was too big to be an outcast for long, and soon he was back in the driver's seat, cheering on the pragmatists, honored by kings and commoners alike.

John Dickinson~April 9, 1952

Dickinson graduated from Johns Hopkins in 1913. He was born on the Eastern Shore of Maryland. His forebears had lived there for three hundred years, so it was natural for him to go to Baltimore for his education. Later he took his Ph.D at Princeton and in 1921 a law degree at Harvard.

He was a very learned man. He knew about philosophy, history, the relations of men with each other, and what the great men of antiquity had said and written. But this accumulation never burdened his friends, for he not only did not parade his erudition, he artfully concealed it under a gay and friendly humor that made him delightful and dependable company.

In the course of time he was Professor of Politics at Princeton and Professor of Law at Pennsylvania. He lectured in economics at Harvard and in history at Amherst. He acquired honorary degrees, and he belonged to learned societies.

When he died at fifty-eight, he was General Counsel for the Pennsylvania Railroad, but, in actual fact, he was working on the whole question of how the privately-owned common carriers are to survive in a government-regulated economy.

He was full of reminiscence drawn from wide experience and a tremendous range of reading, and his booming voice and pleasant laugh recorded those secret springs of joy that flow from hard work in a congenial calling.

Edward Crosby Doughty~October 15, 1952

Crosby Doughty graduated from Williams in 1899. He started out to be an architect, but his talents were too diverse to be confined in one field, and he strayed away into automobile manufacture in Detroit, the Ordnance Department of the Army in both of the wars, and then into precision work in metals.

Besides his vocation, he was exceptionally well informed, especially concerning the battles of the Civil War; wrote free verse of high quality; and was an organist of considerable ability. He contributed to several of the Club's art exhibits examples of his skill in painting and of his craftsmanship in silver, brass, and weaving. His special artistic achievements were in the field of photography. A lover of nature, Crosby sensitively appreciated the nuances of color and form of the Berkshire Hills where he lived most of his life. His color photographs of gardens in both the North and the South, notably of the spectacular Cypress Gardens near Charleston, were of rare poetic beauty.

He was a professional photographer and a perfectionist in that line, but he was always fascinated by precision instruments and exactness of measurement. Among his other achievements were the construction of a "hand" loom and its personal operation in producing beautiful fabrics, and the production of a model of the Flying Cloud, commended by the Ship Model Association of New York. Crosby Doughty could, and did, make almost anything out of wood, stone, metal, leather, or other material, always with meticulous accuracy in execution and with exquisite artistic taste in design.

He was a shy man and very happy in the Club where he found other shy men too.

Harry Harkness Flagler~June 30, 1952

Flagler graduated from Columbia in 1897. His father was exceedingly involved with the Standard Oil Company, railroads, and the hotel projects which are familiar in Florida, but Harry was not in the least interested in these matters.

His temperament was artistic, and as early as 1903 he became Secretary of the Permanent Fund Orchestra, which later led to the development of the Philharmonic Society. He reorganized the Symphony Society of New York in 1914 and supported it generously through its early years. In 1928, when it was merged with the Philharmonic he became President of the Philharmonic-Symphony, a position which he held till 1934. If it had not been for his help, the Orchestra would not have survived the financial depression of those times.

For twenty-two years he was President of the Trustees of Millbrook School, and his loyalty, generosity, and wise counsel never flagged. In an age when deportment is becoming less and less formal he may have appeared somewhat reserved in social relationships, but he was wonderfully friendly, and his old-world etiquette was a foil for a delightful sense of humor.

He lived at Millbrook, which he loved, and there he was a link with the outside world.

John Flanagan~March 28, 1952

John Flanagan's father was a sculptor, and he sent John to study under Augustus Saint-Gaudens in New York and later in the École des Beaux Arts under such French masters as Henri Chapu and Alexandre Faiguiere. Post hoc or propter hoc, John Flanagan became a first-rate sculptor and the prime designer of coins and medals of his time. Of the thirty-seven medallions that adorn the walls of the medal room in the Club, fifteen are the work of John Flanagan.

In 1932 he designed the George Washington quarter, issued in connection with the bicentennial anniversary of the birth of Washington, and he also did the monumental clock in the Library of Congress, the memorial portrait of Samuel Langley in the Smithsonian Institution, and the Verdun medal presented by President Harding to the City of Verdun for its heroic defense in the First World War. For some twenty-five or thirty years he designed almost all the interesting medals that were struck in France or America.

When he died, Mr. Flanagan was eighty-seven years old, and so it comes to pass that he is remembered as a rather frail old gentleman, always carefully turned out, wearing a wing collar, four-in-hand with scarf-pin, and pince-nez from which dangled a black silk cord. His manner was courteous and friendly, and he had a ready smile and pleasant nod which betokened understanding and sympathy.

William Henry Fox~January 18, 1952

Fox was born in Philadelphia, and he graduated from the University of Pennsylvania. He was immersed in the fine arts, and worked in that department of the St. Louis Exposition in 1904 and later in Rome as Secretary-General of the International Exhibition of Art and History.

In 1914 he became Director of the Brooklyn Museum, and he continued at that till 1934, when he retired. He was an exceedingly successful Director, and under him the Museum grew and prospered enormously. He was constantly going to Europe, arranging art exhibits, and securing extraordinary specimens and objects for Brooklyn. One of the things that interested him was the examination of old paintings by X-ray, which frequently turned out to be palimpsests on which older and more astonishing paintings were revealed beneath the top one. He also examined Egyptian mummies in this way without unwrapping them.

In his last years Fox returned to his native Philadelphia to live quietly, surrounded by the mementoes of a long and useful life. Though he was ninety-three years old when he died, he remained to the end actively interested in artistic matters and his beloved Brookyln Museum.

He was a gentle, courtly person—the civilized product of a sophisticated society.

Leicester Bodine Holland~February 7, 1952

Holland was an architect and archaeologist, and to these callings he brought a taste and a punctilious mind entirely out of the ordinary. He graduated from Pennsylvania in 1902 and received his doctor's degree there in 1919. At first he went into the practice of architecture in New York, but his interest in classical studies lured him to Athens where he made a famous study of the Erectheum and became involved in direction of the Corinth excavations undertaken by the American School.

He taught fine arts at Vassar, and later at Bryn Mawr he lectured in classical archaeology. For fourteen years he was in the service of the Library of Congress as Chief of the Division of Fine Arts. He was a competent and graceful writer and an engaging speaker. With his background of professional studies and experience he was able to render services beyond the ordinary duties, which added to the repute and influence of the great Library and to its usefulness.

His affirmative interest extended to other projects. He cooperated in the enterprise of the National Park Service and the Works Progress Administration for securing records of historic edifices, and placed measured drawings in the archives that form a unique collection. It was in his capacity as Chairman of the Committee on Historic Edifices that he protested successfully, before a Congressional Committee, a project to modify the east façade of the Capitol by eradicating the indentation that constitutes its main distinction.

With astonishingly diverse interests he combined an excellent training that enabled him to appreciate and appraise the significance of what he saw and found, and he had the magical ability to make it all marvelously interesting when he told about it.

Charles Cheney Hyde~February 13, 1952

Dr. Hyde was Hamilton Fish Professor of International Law at Columbia. He succeeded John Bassett Moore to this most distinguished chair at the age of fifty-two, and he was a worthy successor.

Hyde was continually amazed that at Columbia he was his own master, so that apart from a little teaching he could do just what he wanted. Apparently at Northwestern, where he had been previously, it was not thus.

He was very deaf, and conversation was difficult. One could never be sure Hyde really had heard correctly. But he was a sweet, naïve person and well worth taking some trouble over.

Hyde prided himself on having a keen sense of humor. Certainly he was an inveterate spoofer. He maintained that his father (who had been a distinguished dermatologist in Chicago) had published a treatise to which he gave the title "Hyde on the Skin." This may have been a fact. After his grandson had made his first trip to the zoo, the boy complained that the camels did not smoke and the wolves did not whistle as his grandfather had assured him they would. In oral examinations, he used to embarrass all save the most self-possessed students by prefacing his questions by some such phrase as: "Now, Mr. So-and-so, I should like your authoritative views on this subject. I am here to learn from you"; and, when the reply was unsatisfactory, adding: "Well, I shall have to think that over and decide whether I have always been wrong."

He used to play chess in the East Room on Saturday afternoons. He had taken up the game some years after he came to Columbia and never really learned it. His strategy was to swap pieces off as quickly as possible. Because of his deafness he never realized how loud his voice could be, so members sitting on the other side of the room would sometimes be startled by a shout, "Oh, am I in check? I didn't notice it. I am afraid you are going to beat me."

Everybody liked him. He was long a Vestryman of St. George's Church, where he was exceedingly useful. He turned out some first-class students who are now highly placed in the State Department and elsewhere, and they all recognize their great indebtedness to him.

Robert Foster Kennedy~January 7, 1952

Foster Kennedy was born in Belfast and educated at Queens College there. He served four years as resident medical officer at the National Hospital in London, which was then, and continues to be, the greatest school of neurology in the world. Then, in 1906, he came to New York and became chief of the clinic of the Neurological Institute.

Dr. Kennedy was more than an outstanding physician and neurologist. He was a scholar and a wit, a connoisseur and a philosopher, and conducted his conversation with a faint Irish brogue that gave it a foreign flavor delightful to listen to. The medical fraternity came to regard him as a modern Delphic oracle who always could be counted on to highlight the essentials of a subject with a trenchant quotable phrase. When he was to speak, the room was filled, for the show was sure to be good.

A fellow doctor once asked him to come and look at a patient suddenly attacked by a peculiar failure of eyesight. The patient was much perturbed and waited, after dinner, for Dr. Kennedy to come. The doctor says: "It was in the evening; he came in dinner clothes, wearing an opera cloak, and while examining the patient he wore a monocle. The performance was a work of art, and all the props did a great deal to reassure the patient and make him feel he was in the best of hands."

Dr. Kennedy was a very great neurologist. His was a colorful personality characterized by imagination, audacity, and intellectual integrity. In debate his tongue was sharp, but he was always generous in giving credit to others and was marvelously stimulating to talk to or work with. His power of diagnosis in the neurological field was uncanny—and this because he was not only learned but also wise.

He got around very fast. He knew all the lively and amusing people of the City. He was a good influence on the rich and a kind friend to the poor. And he was the best company to be found anywhere.

Herbert Conrad Lakin~December 29, 1952

Herbert C. Lakin graduated from Harvard in 1894, summa cum laude. He was the Class Orator. He had worked his way through college, becoming the regular Cambridge correspondent of the "Boston Herald." Then he went into the Harvard Law School, from which he graduated in 1898. He was a lively young man who ran the half-mile on the track team most successfully, was editor of the "Law Review," and emerged from Harvard with a brilliant record that secured him a job in the offices of Evarts, Choate & Beaman. As one of his old friends remarks: "He continued this Horatio Alger story by marrying the boss's daughter"—Miss Helen Beaman.

In 1905 he became a partner in Lord, Day & Lord and practiced law there for many years. His main interests were centered in Cuba, and he became general counsel for the Cuba Company and for the Cuba Rail Road. When the Hawley-Smoot tariff was in the process of being compiled, he went to Washington and labored hard and long to keep the duty on cane sugar down to two cents a pound. This he succeeded in doing, to his great satisfaction.

He lived at Scarsdale and was President of the Board of Education there and later in Greenwich. He was well-fitted to deal with education, and his contributions to the operation and policies of the public schools were important and timely. His wife was interested in this also, and for many years she was a Director of the Brearley School.

Lakin was a somewhat intense man, ready in conversation and exceedingly well informed. He was more of an administrator than a lawyer, and he gradually drifted away from law practice into the more congenial field of management where the problems seemed more immediate and vital.

He lived his last years in Stockbridge, near where he was born, and we saw him but seldom in the Century. He was a member for forty-two years.

William Frederick Lamb~September 8, 1952

Bill Lamb graduated from Williams in 1904, and after a year in the Columbia School of Architecture he went to the École des Beaux Arts. This was before the First World War, and in those far-off days the Latin Quarter still looked something like the pictures in Trilby: students were poor, romantic, and disorderly, and the cares of the world were pretty much confined to ardent speculations about the private life of Edward VII.

Lamb was awarded the Diplôme by the French Government in 1911, and came back to New York and went into the office of Carrère and Hastings. After a decade he formed a firm of his own, and it prospered exceedingly. Shreve, Lamb & Harmon designed the Empire State Building, the Bankers Trust, the Mutual Life, and a score of other outstanding buildings in the City. Lamb was sometimes called "the design member" of the firm, and certainly in the field of design he was supremely gifted. He was an artist, but a very practical one. The limitations of space, time, and expense are inherent in every problem of architecture, and these he accepted and observed as factors quite as essential as the functional requirements or the appearance of a building.

Bill worked hard and long. He was intense and silent while he was at it, but he never took his problems home. He had a strong sense of personal privacy, and he neither asked confidences nor offered them. When he was at the Beaux Arts he had a bad accident riding a motorcycle, and lost his foot. Ever after, he walked with a cane and a slight limp, but he never alluded to this nor took any notice of it.

In appearance, he was tall and slender, with large brilliant brown eyes and a hawknose. He was at once austere and friendly. Everybody who got to know him called him "Bill." He was laconic in conversation and somewhat cautious in statement, and this innate Scotch trait was coupled with an impatience with preciosity and a consistent and stubborn refusal to listen to a bore no matter how rich or important.

He was a native New Yorker, and he loved the City. He was moved by the amazing groupings of its great towers and by the panorama from the top of the Empire State Building looking south as daylight fades. When he was young, he was young, and when he grew up, he was mature and collected.

Adrian Van Sinderen Lambert~October 15, 1952

Adrian Lambert graduated from Yale in 1893 and from the Columbia Medical School in 1896. He was the youngest of three brothers all of whom were distinguished doctors of the City, as their father had been before them. He joined the faculty of the College of Physicians and Surgeons (Columbia) in 1901 and became Clinical Professor of Surgery in 1924. He was associated particularly with Bellevue and Presbyterian Hospitals.

Early in his career, while serving as a surgical intern at New York Hospital, some pus entered his eyes in the course of an operation, in consequence of which he lost his right eye. This great handicap he fully surmounted, but it undoubtedly had a collateral effect on his personality so that he sometimes seemed difficult. He was a first-class teacher and would not endure mediocrity or sloppy work. His mind was orderly and organized, and he had a keen sense of humor and a goodly store of sarcasm that he lavished on his resident staff whenever he considered it necessary for their good.

He was an exceedingly skillful surgeon—dexterous, resourceful, and ingenious—and in his heyday he had no peer in thoracic surgery. He was not gregarious, and he came to the Club but seldom. His close friends were few, but to them he was entirely loyal, and they, in turn, were devoted to him.

Howard Corwin Lewis~October 2, 1952

Howard Lewis was President of Dodd Mead and Company, the publishing house. He worked for them a long time, and before that he had worked for other publishers, beginning back in 1913. Authors usually have trouble with publishers, but nobody had any trouble with Howard Lewis—not even Bernard Shaw, whom Howard captured for his company.

He was wonderfully cool and detached and friendly. He listened with a quizzical smile, and he conversed in a cobwebby, husky voice that marked him as an old clubman. And he was a very reliable clubman. In the Century he had been Secretary and Chairman of the Admissions Committee, and at the time of his death he was a member of the Board of Managers and the Chairman of the House Committee. These are exacting posts, and he brought to them competence and devotion—that kind of quiet, generous effort of a few that makes the Club a happy place for so many.

The Secretary said, writing to Mrs. Lewis: "The House Committee must work always between two groups, the members and the employees. To keep a balance calls for a generous tolerance and a peculiar quality of tact. Howard had these. With them, he not only assured the success of his committee in answering the needs and demands of the members, but he won the affectionate respect of those who serve us. He understood and loved people of many sorts and levels: all of them welcomed his approach in the certainty that he would meet them with equal justice and equal kindness."

Howard was an ardent golfer, a baseball enthusiast, and above all a thoroughly civilized gentleman, interested in everything that was going on. He had endless stories about the Giants from the days of McGraw when he himself knew many of the players. But the charming thing about him was that he led others to talk, and he was amiable about drinking drinks—altogether the perfect companion.

George Malcolm Mackenzie~March 25, 1952

George Mackenzie graduated from Columbia in 1908 and from the College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1913. He was a doctor; and for a long time he was associated with the Presbyterian Hospital and the faculty of Columbia, becoming Associate Professor of Medicine.

In 1927 he went to Cooperstown and became Director and Physician-in-Chief of the Bassett Hospital there. When he came, the Hospital was nothing; when he retired in 1948, the Bassett Hospital was recognized as the model of the very best rural hospitals in America, and it had become affiliated with P. & S. as an officially designated teaching center for training physicians for country practice. The Hospital was what Mackenzie made it, and the task was long and hard and sometimes complicated with bitterness. But he won by sheer force of character, and in the end received the acclaim which was his due.

Mackenzie was eternally youthful. There was a freshness and vitality about him which belied his white hair. He was enormously interested in people, especially the young, and he listened to the good citizens of Cooperstown with a patience and understanding that made him the friend and confidant of all the countryside. His own remarks were characterized by humor and common sense, and his political sentiments were regarded by the local denizens as distinctly radical.

George was delightful company. He was exceedingly accomplished at making cocktails, he loved a good time, and in talk, he always went directly to the heart of the matter without apprehension that the truth could do otherwise than set us free. He never had to grow old. He died of a heart attack a few hours after a round of golf.

Rufus Graves Mather~April 27, 1952

Rufus G. Mather was descended from the Reverend Richard Mather, father of Increase Mather, and so he had been a New Englander for a long time. He graduated from Williams in 1895. He tried his hand at business for a time, but in 1906 he went to Italy, at the instance of his brother who was an art critic, and engaged himself in art research. In this he became enormously interested—not only in art, but in methods of research—and he eventually wrote a most excellent book on archival research.

He lectured on this subject at Harvard, Johns Hopkins, Princeton, Columbia, and the American Academy at Rome, and was the outstanding authority on it. He was living at Princeton when he died.

In 1922 Mather married Winifred Holt, who was already known all over America for her work on behalf of the blind. He became her ardent co-worker in this field, and both of them worked at it unremittingly until her death in 1945. Then he wrote that the happiest, most inspired, and most useful period of his life had come to an end.

Their monuments are "Lighthouses," and will be found throughout the world.

John Wyckoff Mettler~February 13, 1952

John Mettler was born in East Millstone, New Jersey, and he made his home there all his life. He graduated from Rutgers in 1899, and in 1930 he received an honorary LL.D.

He was passionately interested in Rutgers. He was a trustee of the University, for many years Chairman of the Committee on Buildings and Grounds, and he was a wise and loyal alumnus whose influence and works will live long after him.

In 1901 Bettler graduated from the New York Law School, and he practiced for a few years in the City. Then he went into the men's hosiery business at New Brunswick where he was wonderfully successful. The company that he founded and was president of became the largest manufacturer of men's hosiery in the world; and Mettler became the recognized authority of the business and the representative of the industry in dealings with the government.

He had an understanding, not only of material things, but also of spiritual values, the inner worth of education, and the secret wellsprings that actuate men.

John Millis~March 20, 1952

In the class of 1881 at West Point Colonel Millis graduated first. All his life he was an Army Engineer officer, versed in mathematics, physics and astronomy, and enormously interested in earth and sky and what goes on between them. He died in his ninety-fourth year.

When he was very young, the Statue of Liberty was set up in New York Harbor, and Millis designed, executed, and personally installed the lighting system for it, using the old-fashioned arc lights, for modern floodlights were then unknown.

He was recognized in the Army as one of the most competent engineers they had, and he was sent all over the world—China, Burma, India, Egypt, and Europe. He worked on the great levees at New Orleans and the road construction on Mt. Ranier, the fortifications of the Philippines and harbor improvements in Alaska. At one time he had at his disposal a small vessel called the "Monomoy," which used to wander up and down the coast of New England inspecting lighthouses and army posts and otherwise looking for trouble. Small boy friends of his son were thrilled to be entertained aboard at lunch, occasionally, and to be waited on by Filipino messmen.

The Colonel was precise, pleasant, and polite. He always knew what he was talking about, but he was indulgent with the less well-informed and always eager to learn something new. It was amazing that he seemed to know so much about what had only just been discovered, but, of course, he kept looking about him and increasing his understanding all his life—which is not necessarily a typical characteristic of military men.

In his later years he lived in Cleveland and came but seldom to the Century, but he kept contact with his friends in New York and Washington and always was interested in what was going on and who was doing it.

Edward Roberts Moore~June 2, 1952

The Right Reverend Monseigneur Moore graduated from Fordham in 1915 and was ordained to the Catholic priesthood in 1919. For most of his life he worked in the parish of St. Peter's Roman Catholic Church in Barclay Street, the oldest parish in the Archdiocese, and after 1937 he was the pastor there.

His interests were lively and diverse, and he was constantly promoting literary endeavors, discussion groups, and very pleasant social parties both in the parish and outside. Whatever he undertook was carried out with judgment and common sense. He knew the City well and thoroughly understood its problems, and his contributions to civic affairs, slum clearance, and the protection of children were recognized far beyond the City boundaries.

Toward the end of his life he was seized by a mysterious malady for the cure of which he was operated on fourteen times; but it finally carried him off. Between these cruel affairs he was completely nonchalant and seemingly in perfect health.

Moore was the most cultured church pastor in the City, and he combined this with a disengagement from ecclesiastical formality and a complete lack of pretense that made him not only an exceedingly valuable citizen but also a delightful companion.

Russell Owen~April 3, 1952

Russell Owen was born in Chicago in 1889, but his childhood was spent in New England. When he was fifteen he had to quit school and go to work, and after a little while he got himself a job on "The New York Sun." In 1921 he joined "The Times" as a reporter, and he worked there the rest of his life.

In 1925 Owen realized a newspaperman's dream when he was assigned to cover the Scopes trial in Dayton, Tennessee. Scopes was charged with violating the state law by teaching that man was descended from a lower order, and the resulting debate—with the assistance of Mr. W. J. Bryan—made headlines and laughter all over the world. Fewer than twenty years later Owen was to see the state that had derided science provide a home for the most advanced operations of physics, the development of the atomic bomb and electronics.

In 1928 he left New York to go to the Antarctic with the Byrd Expedition. Owen regarded this as his greatest and most challenging assignment, and so did Mr. Ochs, who saw him off.

Owen was uniquely endowed with the gifts that go to make a newspaper man. He used to say that the greatest of these was curiosity—meaning a lively and vital interest in all that people do and are, and why they are that way. He read enormously, and he brought to any assignment a fund of information far out of the ordinary, whether the task was a firsthand report of men on the Antarctic ice, the vagaries of the Scopes trial, a fantastic murder in Honolulu, an encounter with Einstein's relativity, or air-borne adventures with Amundsen or Lindbergh.

A gregarious soul, he was on equally easy terms with eminent explorers and scientists, policemen, baseball players, bishops, barbers, and merchant princes. His friends were everywhere, and he never let them down.

Robert Porter Patterson~January 22, 1952

Patterson was born up-state at Glens Falls in 1891. He graduated from Union College in 1912 and from the Harvard Law School, cum laude, in 1915. He was a lawyer as was his father before him.

In 1930 he was appointed Judge of the United States District Court, and in 1939 he was promoted to be Judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals in New York. An excellent lawyer, he was an entirely admirable judge—patient, laconic, diligent, and learned-without-pedantry. On trials he used to take notes in a loose-leaf book with an enormous fountain pen, and he always knew to just what each witness had testified, what motions had been made, and exactly what he himself was going to do.

In the First World War Patterson was an Infantry officer. He was twice cited in general orders for gallantry, received the D.S.C. for extraordinary heroism in action, and the Silver Star, and was badly wounded. He was the same under fire as in barracks—unhurried, imperturbable, not to be deterred from the swift completion of the task at hand. He was taking a "refresher course" at Plattsburgh in July, 1940, when he received President Roosevelt's telegram asking him to be Assistant Secretary of War. Colonel Stimson, the Secretary, had asked for him.

Six months later he was Under-Secretary and in charge of the Army's $100,000,000,000 procurement program in the Second World War. The importance of this position can hardly be exaggerated. The difficulties were incredible. Patterson designated Mr. X. of Boston as his assistant. Senator Walsh sent Patterson word that X. had insulted him in a speech and that the Senator would disapprove every single request of the War Department for appropriations if X. were appointed. In his fury Patterson would have published the whole sordid story, but Colonel Stimson calmed him and made him capitulate and get on with the war.

Bob was fortunate to work for Colonel Stimson. He enormously admired and respected Stimson, and Stimson loyally backed him up and relied on him with complete confidence. Some people complained that Bob was tough. He was tough, but not for himself; he was tough for the United States. Starry-eyed theorists came to Washington, wasted his time with philosophical vaporings, and then reported he was consumed with egoism because he paid no attention to them. Always, he was getting on with the war, breaking bottlenecks, searching for able officers; he was impatient with doctrinaire incompetents, concerned for the morale of the Army.

Colonel Stimson and Patterson built the greatest Army the world has ever seen. It won the war. The margin of victory was small, but the event was completely decisive. In 1945 Stimson resigned, and the President offered Patterson his choice of being Secretary of War or Justice of the Supreme Court. To this Patterson replied he would leave it to the President, and he was thereupon appointed Secretary of War and awarded the D.S.M. The citation referred to him as an official of "dominating integrity whose contributions to victory cannot be overestimated."

Patterson then devoted himself to effecting the unification of the armed forces, a problem struck through with jealousies, personal ambitions, and ulterior motives. In July, 1947, he told the President he thought the job was done, and he resigned. But once his relentless hand was removed the powerful empire-builders in the services, seeking to undo his work, made life unendurable for his successor.

In 1948 he was back in the City, one of the leaders of the bar, practicing law with Webb and Belknap, and a member of the Century. He was elected President of the Bar Association. He still detested formality and hated getting into evening clothes, but the amenities of civilized private life were softening him up, and he was having a good time and a happy life.

Then he was killed in the crash of an airplane. . . .

This was a man of superlatively high standards, complete integrity, and boundless enthusiasm for whatever task he undertook. The candor of his speech, the courage of his faith, the warm and glowing brightness of his friendship linger always in the memories of those who knew him. He fought the good fight, he was a hard fighter, and his causes were just and right. He was as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land, and men turned to him with the same trust and confidence that they turn with to their own fathers.

Walcott Homer Pitkin~August 18, 1952

Walcott H. Pitkin graduated from Harvard in 1902 and from the Harvard Law School in 1906. He practiced law in a large office in the City for a while and then was appointed by President Taft Assistant United States Attorney for the Southern District. In 1912 he became Attorney-General of Puerto Rico, and there he met and got to know Sosthenes Behn.

From Puerto Rico he went to Siam as adviser on foreign affairs to the government. In that oriental court he followed a little while after the famous E. H. Strobel, who had made the post one of very great importance and prestige.

After some years he returned to New York and joined the legal department of the International Telephone and Telegraph Co. Six months later he became Vice-President and General Attorney. Behn was the head of the corporation and a most extraordinary and brilliant executive, but Pitkin was the Number Two man, the wise, balanced, solid, judgmatical counterpart of the adventurous head. The two men made the great company the dominant factor in communications throughout the world—by cable, telephone, and radio.

An old friend writes: "I was very fond of Walcott. There was one year when we were steady shipmates together—that was back in 1924. We bought a boat. We scraped her, painted her, rigged her and sailed her awkwardly but with great delight up and down the coast in the summer of that year. I never knew anyone whom it was easier to get attached to. He was frank, simple, wise, warmhearted and adventurous. I miss him a great deal."

DeWitt Clinton Poole~August 3, 1952

DeWitt Poole came out of the West by way of the University of Wisconsin where he graduated in 1906. He went into the diplomatic service, and from 1911 to 1914 he was Vice-Consul at Berlin. In 1917 he was assigned to Moscow as American Consul. The Bolsheviks held him prisoner for a short time, but he got safely home again without suffering anything worse than the loss of time and was appointed Chief of Russian Affairs in the State Department. He thought very ill of the Russians, and he never liked them afterwards.

About 1930 he quit the diplomatic service and went to Princeton, where he became Director of the Princeton University School of Public and International Affairs. When the Second World War came, he headed the Foreign Nationalities Branch of the Office of Strategic Services, familiarly known as the O.S.S. The thought was to get American citizens of foreign birth to aid in the war effort. He kept this program from going wrong, and, considering the possibilities, this was an exceedingly important achievement.

All this gave him the background for organizing the National Committee for a Free Europe, of which, in 1949, he became the first President. This enterprise was instrumental in stopping the march of communism, and it continues today as a valuable weapon in the cold war.

Poole was a stocky, brisk, friendly man, full of knowledge of European policies and personalities. He was around the Club a great deal, hobnobbing with people who knew what he was talking about. An experienced foreign observer, he was completely free from quack nostrums for the cure of the world and from any desire (almost an endemic among foreign affairs operatives) to make other nations over in the image of America. He was loyal to his fingertips and brimming over with tales of international bigwigs—gay tales, moving tales, some solemn, some Rabelaisian. He seemed to have a sophisticated aura which diffused a pleasant and comfortable confidence.

Frank Wood Richardson~September 23, 1952

Frank Richardson graduated from Trinity College in 1884. He shortly went into the decorating business of which his father was then the head and which had been founded in 1812 by his grandfather, Colonel John Richardson. The main office of the business was in Auburn, and Richardson's early life was spent there; and there he married and raised a family; and there his wife died. Then he went to Syracuse, following the demands of the business, and finally to New York.

He was a member of the Club for forty-eight years, and in that long time, inevitably, most of his old friends died. He and Robert Bridges used to live at the University Club, and Richardson made it his home for twenty-five years.

He was a tall, thin man with piercing black eyes and a long pale face. His manner was uneasy, and this was accentuated by a continual nervous movement of his head. His conversation was rather abrupt, but he never said anything stupid or obvious, and when he stated a fact, it was invariably correct. He knew all about furniture and his taste was impeccable.

He was more interested in America in the nineteenth century, and earlier, than he was in modern developments, and he made no bones about it. He had been brought up in the Victorian tradition, and he was slightly uncomfortable in the casualness of dress and manners in which we live and move and have our being in these days. He did not complain about this, but he associated himself with The Pilgrims, the Society of Colonial Wars, and the Loyal Legion, and in those circles he was happy and contented.

Howard Chandler Robbins~March 20, 1952

Howard Robbins graduated from Yale in 1899, and he was the class poet. Then he went to the Episcopal Theological Seminary at Cambridge, and in 1911 he became Rector of the Church of the Incarnation, succeeding Dr. Grosvenor, who went to be Dean of the Cathedral. Dean Grosvenor died in 1916, and the following year Robbins, in turn, became Dean of the Cathedral.

The local Ordinary then incumbent was not interested in literature, or aesthetics, or great preaching, or, indeed, in thought in any form, and Dean Robbins, who had a skillful pen and a thoughtful and penetrating approach to church problems, was like Raleigh imprisoned in the Tower. In 1929 he resigned, saying only that there was "a difference of opinion," and went back to the Church of the Incarnation as Rector.

All during his ministry Dean Robbins was passionately interested in the merging of the Episcopal and Presbyterian communions, and for that he toiled unceasingly. He became Professor of Pastoral Theology at the General Theological Seminary, where his teaching and preaching were marked with courage and liberalism and tolerance and his classes were crowded with the young and vital. To discussions of important matters he brought a cultured and well-informed mind and a never-failing courtesy that devastated the carping vaporings of narrow partisans and made them appear silly. He had sufficient faith in his own sect not to be afraid of the consequences of organic merger with another.

Like all poets he required solitude from time to time. He was elected Bishop Coadjutor of Southern Ohio in 1929, after his resignation from the Cathedral, but he would not take it. He wanted to teach and write and preach, and in this he was well advised.

He was a kind and gentle person.

Charles Scribner~February 11, 1952

With the death of Charles Scribner, the Century was left without a member of the Scribner family for the first time in seventy-five years. Charles's father was a Centurion for fifty-one years, and both his uncle, Arthur, and his great-uncle, Blair Scribner, were members.

The heavy responsibility which Charles assumed when, in 1932, he became head of the publishing dynasty that his grandfather had founded in 1846, in no way affected his natural gaiety, his exuberant sense of humor, or his warm friendships with his associates and employees. Intensely loyal, accessible to everyone, deeply concerned with the personal problems of those he worked with, he exercised authority with tolerance and modesty.

Born in New York in 1890, Charles was educated at St. Paul's School and graduated from Princeton in 1913. Immediately after that he entered Charles Scribner's Sons. As an employee in various departments, he learned the intricate business of a great publishing house. This was interrupted by the First World War. A remount officer with the Quartermaster Corps of the Army, he was able to use the expert knowledge of horses he had gained since childhood.

He was Vice-President of Scribner's from 1918, and he became a close friend of many Scribner authors, such as Winston Churchill, James Barrie, John Galsworthy, F. Scott Fitzgerald, and Ernest Hemingway. His quick observation and imagination discovered qualities in the house's writers which others had missed, and his estimates of them were original and enlivened with friendly humor.

His responsibilities were continuous and exacting and kept him from spending much time in the Club, but he was keenly aware of the long association of the Scribner family with the Century, and this consciousness was part of the very fabric of his being and a source of happiness to him.

Frank Channing Smith, Jr.~January 12, 1952

Frank Smith was a lawyer of Worcester, and, as such, he ranked with those at the top of the profession in Massachusetts. But his avocation was art.

He was a Trustee of the Worcester Art Museum from 1919, Vice-President from 1946 to 1949, and President from 1949 until his death. As a collector he was interested in Italian primitives, of which he possessed a small but valuable collection, which he lent at times to various art exhibits in principal cities. For many years he was a Visitor to the Fine Arts Department of Harvard, and he had been formerly a Trustee of Smith College.

He was one of the leading citizens of Worcester, identified with all kinds of civic enterprises, but to the Art Museum he was a fostering genius. He brought to its affairs an interest in art that was real and informed; his enthusiasm and his work to promote the welfare of the institution were an inspiration to all those about him in the Museum's organization. These personal contacts were enriched by his good humor, keen insight, and friendly nature.

He loved company. He loved his fellow men. He loved to entertain. He was a genial host and a comfortable companion—an interesting and stimulating talker.

Charles Messer Stow~May 15, 1952

Charles M. Stow was a journalist for almost half a century, and he rose to the top positions in the newspaper world. He was admirably equipped for editorial work. He thoroughly knew American history, and he was enormously interested in antiquities and the preservation of monuments, buildings, and furniture associated with the past. So it came about after a while that he began to devote himself exclusively to this field.

He became antiques editor of "The Sun," and when that paper was absorbed, he joined the staff of the "World-Telegram." His writings and lectures gained him a national reputation as a crusader for the preservation of historical landmarks, and his book on Currier and Ives prints is the accepted authority.

In all this there emerges a deliberate pattern, a mosaic, designed to interpret our inheritances and to appreciate and preserve the outward symbols. Stow had an infinite capacity for patient research, and his care in delineating detail and his delicate sense of the relationship between the inward spirit of our past and the tangible evidences of it were directly productive of a vast interest and understanding on the part of the public. He did a great and important work of education, and his contribution to the knowledge and acceptance of the traditions which bind together the peoples of this country is inestimable.

Austin Strong~September 17, 1952

Austin Strong was born in San Francisco. His maternal grandmother, Fanny Vandergrift, was the wife of Robert Louis Stevenson, and Austin spent his boyhood, till he was fourteen, in Stevenson's home, "Vailima," on Samoa. This was a priceless experience, and to hear him tell of "Vailima" was unforgettable. He could talk and write supremely well about anything that moved him.

His abilities were as rich and varied as was his career. He studied landscape architecture in France and Italy, and practiced it in New Zealand; but when he was thirty, he came to New York and began to write plays. They were first-class. "Seventh Heaven" in 1922 ran 704 performances at the Booth Theater, and he was the author of half a dozen others which had long runs in London and New York.

With all this success, Austin was a shy and diffident person. He liked to get out to Nantucket where everybody knew him well and where his associations reached back for many years. The local carpenter there taught him the ritual when he became a Mason. He was sometime Commodore of the Nantucket Yacht Club, and one of his particular consecrations was teaching children to sail their little "Rainbow" catboats in the harbor. He started a quaint organization of old sea dogs, the "Wharf Rats," and when the Strongs made landfall in the spring, they were welcomed with a salute from the little cannon of the "Wharf Rats" on Old North Wharf.

In the Century, Austin had served on the Board of Management, the Nominating Committee, the Committee on Admissions, and other committees of the Club. He was an exceedingly useful member and thoroughly imbued with Century traditions. He refused to permit the bar to be extended; and was wonderfully fervent (and quite right) in denouncing any member who tried to talk business in the sacred precincts.

He had a positive genius for organizing spectacles and pageants. He took complete charge of the Roman Twelfth Night Celebration in 1933. It was a marvelous occasion and became the talk of the town—especially among the wives of the members. In grateful recognition of his labors a medal, designed by Mahonri Young, was cast in bronze, bearing a portrait of him in a toga, with an inscription by Leonard Bacon:

Life is short,
Art is long:
Only the Young
Can sculpt the Strong.

A plaster model of this joyful medallion hangs in the bar today.

In 1947 came the great Centennial Anniversary of the Club, and Austin created and directed the historical pageant which was given at that time. This, too, was a performance of extraordinary interest, involving imagination and dramatic technique of the highest order. Every member of the Century was proud and happy to be associated with such a feat, and it was necessary to give two performances to accommodate the eager spectators. The evening concluded, be it remembered, with a group of little children prophesying the future in verse.

Austin was at the Club a great deal, pleasantly and happily occupied there. He had an understanding heart, and he was kind and generous. When his sympathies were engaged, he was loyal and incautious and wholly without guile. He never compromised with the truth as he saw it, for the sake of expediency, and so he bound his friends to him with hoops of steel.

Stanley Adams Sweet~August 3, 1952

Stanley A. Sweet graduated from Yale in 1907 and went to Paris to study art. He was exceedingly interested in art, but family pressures led him back to New York to join his father's company, Sweet-Orr & Co. There he rapidly became an important factor, and after his father's death in 1917 he was made President.

He was unusual in combining skill as a manufacturer and industrialist with real ability as an artist. He might justly claim to have graduated from the amateur ranks when he was paid $1,000 for a portrait of the President of Aetna Life Insurance Company for their board room. For many years he attended a life-sketching and painting group which used this means to keep in practice. His Christmas cards showed how successfully Sweet achieved this object. He was an excellent draughtsman.

In the field of labor management he was responsible for the exceptional record of Sweet-Orr & Co. He got along wonderfully well with the labor unions, and he recognized them and dealt with them long before this was generally accepted as the proper course. "Well," he would say, "Joe-who-knows-our-business-better-than-we-do, let's sit down together and work this out. There are no problems too great if men of good will are determined to work them out collectively. . . ."

In the early years of the Roosevelt administration Sweet was Chairman of the Cotton Garment Code Authority. He was President of the Union Made Garment Manufacturers Association; and he was also President of the Yale Club. Genial, simple, and straightforward, he inspired confidence and affection.

Lewis Hill Weed~December 21, 1952

Lewis Weed graduated from Yale in 1908, and from the Johns Hopkins Medical School in 1912. He was a doctor and remarkably expert in research, and he probably came to know more about the brain and its functioning than anyone in the country. This was no accident, for he began a notable investigation of the brain even before he completed his studies, and from Johns Hopkins he went to the Harvard Medical School, and there worked under the eminent direction of Harvey Cushing.

Weed was a passionate believer in libraries; and in this no doubt he had been influenced by Welch and Osler and Kelly. He raised the money for the Welch Library at Johns Hopkins, and, much later, helped Cushing with the new medical library at Yale. He was a member of the Yale Corporation from 1947 until his death, and he was also a Trustee of the Institute for Advanced Study at Princeton. His main employment, however, was as Dean and then Director of the Johns Hopkins Medical School.

This required him to live in Baltimore, of course, but in 1939 he was called to become Chairman of the Division of Medical Sciences of the National Research Council. When the war came, Weed was obliged to spend full time in Washington. His regimen consisted of breakfasting at 6:30 in Baltimore, being at his desk in Washington at 8:30, a long day of heavy duties with endless committees, often dinner in Washington, and back to Baltimore on a late train, only to be up the next morning for another 6:30 breakfast. This went on for ten long years, and then his health broke and he had to spend a year at Saranac.

Beginning his career in the dissecting room, a seeker after scientific knowledge in the dismembered human frame, this restless bachelor became a leader and counselor of those who heal the broken bodies of men and unite in constructive research for the welfare of our race.

Adolph Alexander Weinman~August 3, 1952

Adolph Weinman was born in Germany; but when he was a little boy, he came through the Gateway to America (Castle Garden) as an immigrant, and he lived here the rest of his life. The family had no money, and Weinman went to a public school on the East Side till he was fourteen. Then he went to work carving mirror frames, pistol grips, meerschaum pipes, and such things in a small studio. In the evenings, however, he studied sculpture at the Cooper Union; and there Philip Martini found him and took him with him to work on the World's Fair in Chicago in 1893. Then Weinman knew he was going to be a sculptor.

His start was slow, but as he passed through his fourth decade, his output increased incredibly. His creative talent found outlets in the monumental sphinxes flanking the entrances to the Scottish Rites Temple in Washington, in the sculpture for the pediment of the Archives Building, and in the façade of the Post Office Building. A master of low relief, he did much to improve our coinage and designed the new dime and the half dollar issued in 1916. His superb statue of General Alexander Macomb in Detroit illustrates his genius in resolving that nightmare of all sculptors, the portrait statue. His ideal figures for the fountains of "The Rising Sun" and "The Setting Sun" in the Court of the Universe at the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco in 1915 have since found permanent places in American museums, while his figures of Alexander Hamilton and DeWitt Clinton, for the Museum of the City of New York, and his three statues of Lincoln attest to his understanding of the hearts and minds of men.

It is remarkable that one with so little formal schooling in the liberal arts came to be the foremost sculptor of America. The fact is, of course, he was self-educated, and his education never ceased. To associate with Olin Warner and Augustus Saint-Gaudens was an inspiration and a vast mind-opener, and Weinman was a first-rate person who found his own level at the top.

Those who work with their hands and make tangible, visible things know a great satisfaction. A thing of beauty is a joy forever; its loveliness increases; it will never pass into nothingness.
